During the early 60s era, the demand for giant bean bag chairs was restricted only to hippies. In fact, during 60s as well 70s era, almost every hippie seemed to have one. After all, these items were easy to carry from one place to another. And hippies are travelers. That is why these bags became instant hit among the hippy community. However, these items slowly dried out during the 80s and 90s. But with the arrival of new millennium, bean bags have made a comeback. And this time, their popularity is not only restricted to the hippy community. Rather, they have become extremely popular among regular people also. The modern are much fancier in appearance. In fact, the modern versions come with stronger quality. No filling to come out after a couple of use. In fact, materials used in preparing the bean bags these days are more skin friendly. Memory foam is one of the common components used in manufacturing the bean bag. As a result, the highest level of comfort can be achieved while sleeping on these items.

Bean bags are available in different shape, size, and color. In fact, they are not only for the hippies these days. They are available both for kids as well adults. However, cost of a giant bean bag chair has grown up by a little margin in this era. The largest sized chairs can cost around $500 while smaller four footed bean bag chairs can be within a range of $100-$200. Most of the bean bag chairs comes with a lifetime warranty. So, there is no problem to face in case the fillings come out or stitches open up. Bean bag chairs are also available through the internet at discounted rates.
