Moving to Canada? Whether for business or personal purposes, you will need help of professional Canada movers to move your home/office furniture and materials. Some of the best International relocation services provide a complete moving solution for clients looking to relocate to Canada. However, relocating across the border can be quite a troubling experience, which is why one needs to pre-plan before considering an international move. Here are some key points that you must need to know before you plan a move:

1. When you pack your boxes, make sure you label it properly. All boxes should have the "Packed by Owner" label. You will also have to list the contents and number each box. This will help you easily sort them out when the goods get delivered to the location.
2. You must be present when the Canadian customs department clears your shipment. If you are not present, then the customs department will hold the goods in bond. You should not worry as the driver will inform you about the custom office near the delivery location. This way, you can have an appointment and get your goods cleared with the custom office.
3. When moving from U.S. to Canada, individuals must have current legal documentation to ensure they don't fall into legal hassles. Here are important documentation requirements you must comply with:

If you are a US citizen and are moving to Canada, then make sure you have a valid passport. You can also have a birth certificate for interstate moving. Make sure you have birth certificates for each traveling member.

You must have a Canadian Immigrant Visa.

Make sure you have at least 2 copies of the inventory list. The list should contain the names of all items that are about to be shipped from US to Canada.

There are times when some items might have to be delivered at a later date. In case, there are such items, then do create a separate list for them and have at least 2 copies.

Request a letter from your new employer. This will act as proof and validate your transfer, especially if you are moving state to state
