Buying anything in bulk, like wholesale candy, has the potential to give you a significant price break, especially when compared to buying it one at a time. Knowing how much you're expecting to sell should help you find the correct amount of candy and wholesale bulk chocolate that you should buy. The further your sales forecast goes, the more you can buy and the more you will save. However there is a cap on how far the price will drop if you buy candy in bulk. If a month's worth of candy is the same price as two weeks's worth, then it's best to keep fresh stock and buy every two weeks.

Buying chocolate in bulk is very time intensive, because chocolate has a shorter shelf life than other candies. Buying wholesale bulk chocolate can pay off or just go bad on your shelves so it's best to buy the minimum and go through it before you buy again. It's best to stock up on favorites and popular brands as these go faster than others. However off brands are cheaper and popular with children, because they usually come in a variety of different flavors and lower price points. Other wholesale candy, such as hard candies, can be bought in larger quantities due to a longer shelf life.

Hard candy is a favorite of the old, because as you get older your sense of taste lessens. The pallets of the elderly can detect the three strongest tastes best: salt, sour, and sweet. Most mature people choose sweet because it's the most enjoyable. This is a handy piece of information, especially if you are serving a large population of people over 60. Buying wholesale candy in bulk will ensure you are saving money and hard candies last the longest!

Buying candy that is individually packaged gives you a greater return on your dollar because you don't have to worry about the entire package spoiling if you only need to sell a small portion. You can mark up the price on your wholesale candy to turn a profit for your store, and it can become a very lucrative business once you get the hang of it. However, that being said, you also need to make sure that you have a set business plan in place. Without one, candy won't make you very much money, regardless of if it is purchased in large quantities.
