Refusing Breath Test – But Beware of the Totting Up Process by Julia Roger

Article published on June 14th 2012 | Business

Every type of motoring offence can lead to some sort of tricky situation. Although the accused personal may get away easily by paying some heavy cash amount as penalty, but that may well not end the trouble. A certain penalty point is added to the accused personal's license. In addition, when the total number of penalty point reaches 12 in three calendar years, totting up takes place.

When Totting up takes place, a driver may get his/her driving license suspended for a minimum period of 6 months. Maximum suspension order can be 24 months! Once the license is suspended, the driver legally cannot drive a vehicle within that particular period. However, if the driver is taking some illegal steps, then do it at their own risk. However, illegal driving is even a much severe offence. It can lead to jail sentence for 5 years! In addition, not only jail sentence, but also the accused driver needs to pay monetary amount as penalty fine. The fine amount can be quite higher.

In UK or US, traffic sergeants have full power to stop a vehicle in the mid of road and ask driver for a breath test. The legal officer can force driver to sit for breath test. Refusing breath test can be quite offensive and is considered to a big offence. There is a certain limitation of alcohol intake while driving vehicles. Anything higher than the limitation level will result in penalty points and fine. Cancelling license may also happen in case a driver carries out such an offence on regular basis. Breaking the speed barrier can lead to penalty points. In most of the case, speed limit is broken by those who drink and drive. This even leads to severe accidents. Hence, driving laws have become such strict in this part of the world.
