

Article published on December 14th 2011 | Career

In today's competitive world, if you want to stay ahead of the rat race then you need to have all the information regarding your goal and your focus should be clear. Despite the huge opportunities offered by the private sector jobs, the jobs in the public sector still remain coveted for the benefits and perks that they offer along with job stability. No wonder thousands of intelligent candidates work hard and prepare for the exams conducted by the central and the state governments and try their luck every year.

Teaching has been the most noble and stable profession which is opted by both boys and girls for the respect that it commands. So if you are looking to become a teacher in the schools run by the government then be sure to have the latest information about the date and the pattern of the exams that are conducted for various posts. The CTET (Central Teacher Eligibility Test) 2012 is about to be held in the month of January. The interested candidates can open the related website and read all the important information mentioned about this exam and start preparing for this prestigious exam.

This exam is conducted by the Board of Secondary Education, Delhi by the orders of the Ministry of Human Resource Development. The website clearly mentions the schools to which the exam applies. The application form costs Rs. 500 for the general and OBC category and Rs. 250 for the schedule caste, schedule tribes and differently abled category.

The date of CTET 2012 examination has been fixed as 29th of January. The application form will be available to the candidates from the fifth of November to the twenty fifth of November. Online application forms can be filled between first of November to twenty fifth of November. For the candidates who live in the remote areas, a grace period of seven days is provided and they can submit their forms latest by seventh of December. The website clearly mentions the description of the remote areas. The last date for the submission of forms has been fixed at thirtieth of November 2011.

The CTET 2012 examination consists of two papers each of one and a half hours. The details about the pattern and the syllabus of the examination can be viewed on the CBSE website.

The candidates can not only get the information regarding the exam but also ask any query. The reply will be made shortly through e-mail. So the candidates can get all their questions answered before enrolling for this prestigious exam.

The CTET 2012 exam is the first step towards a bright future. So, fill the form now to make your mark in the teaching profession which is all set to be a most sought after career as the emphasis on education is continuously increasing and so is the demand for quality teachers. Join as teacher in one of the schools run by the central or state government to have a respectable and lucrative career.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/career-articles/ctet-2012-the-key-to-a-bright-future.htm> - Article Side

Preeti - About Author:

SarkariExam.com is a job Portal which provides detail of all Government Jobs In India, Freshers Jobs and much more. Explore a CTET 2012, a AIEEE 2012, a RPSC and much more.

Article Keywords:
CTET 2012,AIEEE 2012,RPSC

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!