Physiciansâ€™™ answering service offers 24-hour customer support at reasonable rates. In many clinics, the quality of the support staff is often not up to the mark, leaving the patients distressed and frustrated when their calls are not attended. With a professional answering service in your office, you can be certain all patient questions will get a prompt response regardless of the time the calls are made. This is particularly vital during emergencies when patients may be forced to seek medical attention elsewhere if their calls are not answered at once.

Why a physiciansâ€™™ answering service is popular:

â€¢ The physiciansâ€™™ answering service ensures that patients are never left waiting for medical assistance in times of emergencies.

â€¢ Maintaining a full-fledged receptionist staff can turn out to be costlier than hiring a professional answering service to handle patient inquiries. Incidentally, you are required to pay exorbitant salaries to hire receptionists for services during odd hours, which may drain your funds. Therefore, the physiciansâ€™™ answering service is unarguably a cost-effective alternative.

â€¢ These automated services typically make use of updated and advanced message recording and storing techniques. All patient messages get stored and delivered according to HIPAA guidelines.

â€¢ These services can sort calls depending on their degree of urgency. So, the urgent calls are immediately forwarded to the appropriate medical practitioner for immediate response, whereas the routine calls for rescheduling of appointments or clarification of medical prescriptions are left for the following working day.

â€¢ Chances of miscommunication are least as all patient messages are recorded in their own voices. This enables the concerned doctor to come to a correct diagnosis.

â€¢ Hiring these services is both economical and convenient. There is no legal obligation involved. Therefore, you are free to discontinue these services if you are not satisfied.

How does a physiciansâ€™™ answering service work

Prerecorded messages are used to greet patient callers. They are then given the option to leave their medical details. They can select from the multiple options presented to them which in turn allows the answering service systems to categorize the calls. When there are emergency calls, the message gets conveyed through text message or via emails to the on-call doctor. The staffs using these answering systems are professionally trained to cater to different kinds of offices having different kinds of business needs.

A physiciansâ€™™ answering service helps you answer patient calls and respond to patient questions in a timely manner. It can take care of tedious clinic-related activities like scheduling patient appointments. This relieves the doctors of the hassles of having to arrange for fast appointments for their patients. All messages are forwarded through web mails so that the treatment never gets delayed. During emergencies they can connect the patients with their relevant doctors; if any physician is unavailable, they ensure that you get help from another equally qualified medical professional. When call handling functions are outsourced, it allows the clinic staff to concentrate on other working areas for running the clinic efficiently. These reasons have made the physiciansâ€™™ answering service popular among modern-day medical practitioners. It is helping them to reduce their staff workload and cater to their patients better than before.
