Special Offerings of Premium Online Dating Sites by Braeden Brady

Article published on March 15th 2012 | Dating

It is now very competitive for online dating in the Internet today as there are many online dating sites sprouting up. Many entrepreneurs are clamoring the Internet for a piece of the online dating venture pie which seems to be very attractive. A high return is expected with the low capital investment with the generation of online dating sites.

Requirements

Almost all online dating sites offer about the same dating features unless they offer special features that set them apart from the rest. To be at the forefront of the pack, premium online dating sites need to be different; interestingly different from the other providers.

It could be an attractive and well layout website structure with a catchy name that is easy to remember such as "DateMe"™ or "FunDates"™. An easy to navigate web page would be an added advantage that distinguishes a premium online dating site from others. However, these physical features may not suffice to stay at the pole position of online dating for too long. There must be constantly more and new offerings which are not found in other online dating sites.

Psychometric Test

Hence, the availability of a psychometric test could be one of the special offerings that premium online dating sites may want to have to attract more members to their sites. A psychometric test is a special test which online dating sites members can take on to check on their own personality and character traits.

Undertaking this test would help members identify who they are or how they react to various people and situations. Such knowledge would help them narrow down their search for compatible online daters from their online dating sites database. Thus, less time is wasted in searching for and securing a successful online date.

A psychometric test is a unique offering that sets any online dating site as a premium and innovative online dating provider in the market. Such an offering is a huge selling point for any online dating site. It is a fun test for members.

Workshops

Premium Online Dating Sites would offer special online workshops that would be helpful to their members; especially their premium members. These are extra services that are made available to enhance their premium members'™ online dating experience.

Online workshops could include speaking skills, makeup, soft skills, technical skills and character building workshops. These special workshops can be in the form of video trainings or chat room discussions where relevant skills are targeted through various planned activities.
