If beauty "pristine and rugged - is the trigger then there can be few parallels to the Badland National Park of South Dakota fame. Budget car rentals invite you to discover a familiar National Park that nestles in the South West Preserves of South Dakota in the United States.

The diversities of nature never cease to amaze and the Badland National Park is standing testimony to the fact - considering the subtle blend of truncated and pinnacled mountain ranges contrasting with wide expanses of prairies of United States. Those with a penchant for the outdoors could scarcely have opted for a better option as the park encompasses well over two hundred and forty thousand acres of virgin nature waiting to be explored.

If trekking, camping or even a sedate stay at the lodge at the preserve is the preference there can scarcely be a better option than the Badland National Park. The Badland National Park is open twelve months a year "however those taking the trip on Christmas, Thanksgiving or even New Year Day could be in for a disappointment "for these are the three exceptions in a year when operations are closed.

The Ben Reifel Visitor Center can be contacted for information and organized trip plans within the park "the much talked about ranger led program is a major attraction at the park. The limitation being that this is available solely in the summer months. Summer is the time to visit considering The White River Center in the South Unit is also open exclusively in the summer months.

In an effort to preserve and retain the wonders of nature "the Badlands National Park administration keeps manmade interventions and erections at a low. This being best collaborated by the fact that The Cedar Pass Lodge is the sole lodging and restaurant at the Park "so those wanting to stay here contact early to avoid disappointments.

Those budget car rentals enthusiasts, who have a thing for camping, could scarcely stay away from the Badland National Park. There are two options of camping available "the Sage Creek Primitive Campground and the more familiar Cedar Pass Campground. The limitations are few "the capacity is finite so the need is to book early and the duration of camping is limited to a modest fourteen days. Planning on activities to undertake can never be a challenge while at the Park - trek the mountains, camp at the creek and finally trek through the prairie grass while enjoying the badlands. There are destinations where the motto is "pack up and go"™. The Badland National Park is definitely not one of them "for one need to prepare for the trip. It could be an impulse desire to visit the Badlands but it needs to be planned ahead if the trip has to happen and you can find USA car rental ready for help in your car hire needs to reach your destination.
