Choose an Online Degree for Your Criminal Justice Education by William Hauselberg

Article published on July 19th 2012 | Education

If you have a passion for justice, fairness, and serving your community, you may want to consider pursuing a career in criminal justice. As the need increases for public safety, so is the demand for law enforcement personnel, making it a great time to get started on the path to your new career.

If you've given any thought to getting a degree in criminal justice, but are hesitant due the demands of a college schedule and how it may conflict with your current situation, you have the option of completing your degree online. Online Degrees Offer Convenience, Flexibility

When you study criminal justice online, you receive the same level and quality of education that you would in a traditional classroom setting, but with the convenience of studying on your own time and from the comfort of your own home. Online education offers flexibility for individuals who wish to maintain full-time employment while attending school, making it ideal for non-traditional students with careers and a family to support.

With an online degree in criminal justice, you can start a new career in public law enforcement or private security. The training provided in an online criminal justice program will adequately prepare you to work in the criminal justice system. In fact, an Associate in Applied Science Degree in Criminal Justice exceeds the minimum education requirements for both the Chicago Police Department and the Illinois State Police, making you a highly qualified candidate and giving you a leg up on others in the field.

Students who study criminal justice online must complete 100 credit hours of coursework. Courses include a combination of general education studies and training specific to criminal justice including Ethics, Corrections, Criminology, Juvenile Justice, Police Operations and more.

The skills you will obtain in a criminal justice program will allow you to identify potentially hazardous situations and give you the skills and knowledge you need to manage crisis and conflict situations appropriately. You will be taught how to enforce laws and the rights of individuals, recognize legal limitations, and identify any issues that may impact objectivity, impartiality, fairness, and justice in order to help you maintain professionalism and meet the high ethical standards of the field.

When selecting a criminal justice program in Chicago, be sure to choose an institution accredited by the Higher Learning Commission and is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.
