

Article published on June 18th 2012 | Home Improvement

Why would you select traditional windows made of wood? They call for a coating of paint every alternate year, they stop working in the rails, they are difficult to clean and more difficult to renovate, and they are usually costly and a pain in the neck.

However, the scenario has changed. Because of an array of product innovations and technological advancements, traditional wood windows of today are more dependable, long-lasting, and multipurpose than you might imagine. Sleek hardware, firm plastic rails that operate smoothly, low-maintenance cladding, and new-age glazing are amongst the latest progresses.

Apart from natural warmth, splendor and excellent thermal attributes, a window with wooden frames can add a unique style to the exterior as well as interior of the house. The leading manufacturers construct traditional windows in a broad assortment of typical shapes and sizes. In case you own an unusual size of opening or have an exceptional shape in mind, you can order a tailor-made product from a credible manufacturer or from a specialty store.

Wood is a lot superior insulator compared to aluminium and vinyl. However, it is susceptible to alterations in moisture and temperature. Hence, it expands as it soaks up dampness and contracts as it becomes dry. This rise and fall takes place all the time, giving rise to deterioration in paint, putty, and other substances applied to the surface. If left vulnerable, timber will slowly start to break down.

To ensure the durability of a traditional wood window, you should paint and stain it at regular intervals of one or two years. So, it is definitely a demanding job. With the passage of time, paint that is piled up on sash grooves or sills can make windows more difficult to operate and may result in infiltration of air.

As a substitution, producers came up with clad varieties to keep these elements away. All wood that is visible to outside is covered by a slight coating of aluminium or vinyl, thereby not allowing ultraviolet light to enter. This gives you the freedom to skip a paint job and still get pleasure from the wood's beneficial properties inside. Nevertheless, cladding is not devoid of hindrances. For beginners, it can shoot up the expenditure. There are also limited colour options, usually white and a couple of shades of grey and brown.

When it comes to installing traditional windows, you should provide the manufacturer with the dimensions of the window openings and the depth of the wall. The majority of companies will send a professional to your residence to note down the dimensions and talk about various alternatives, but at times solely after you visit their office with your needs. Certain companies have expertise in both construction and installation of traditional windows. They will be your best bet; contact them today!

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/home-improvement-articles/traditional-windows-various-reasons-to-opt-for-wood.htm> - Article Side

Hamilton Lee - About Author:

Hamilton Lee is a specialist in wood windows and doors that play an important role in beautifying your home. His website offers a traditional windows with the most up to date technology. If youâ€™re a great admirer of such windows, visit the site immediately.

Article Keywords:
Traditional Windows

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!