Artificial Grass is in Great Demand - Why? by Julia Roger

Article published on June 6th 2012 | Interior Design

Artificial grass is the perfect item that has contributed immensely by being a viable solution in instances where the environment is known to be hostile to the natural grass.

artificial grass surface when placed over the concrete base yields great results. For instance, they hardly give the kind of troubles that are associated with traditional grass and dirt field. That explains why players playing on natural grass surface often encounter a lot of wear and tear in their ankles, feet, knees and lower back. There are many instances where the players have ended up having very short careers because of such injuries.

One of the very pertinent questions that come to mind the moment artificial lawns are mentioned is â€“ can they withstand greater use the way it is found in natural grass. This is where the artificial types score the brownie points with their terrific abilities to withstand such use. Additionally, a lot of sports facilities across the globe have shown an increased desire to have them mainly because they are saved from resorting to tedious maintenance efforts.

Swimming pool and roof gardens are some areas where finding the artificial lawns has become a regular feature. Unlike the natural grass, it is not damaged by high heat and chemicals. With the increase in demand for such items, the manufacturers have come out with some wonderful options. For instance, they are best known for offering artificial turf systems that gives a freedom to integrate fibre-optic into the turf. This makes it easy for lighting or gives you the freedoms to embed the advertisement in the playing surface. Of course, the only defect they suffer from is the requirement of periodic disinfection. Besides, there is a lot of friction arising out of artificial turf and skin which often leads to burns or abrasions. Therefore, it is recommended that you have a better understanding of the type before you decide to opt for one.
