Top Reasons to Hire a Truck Accident Lawyer by Edmund Brunetti

Every year, nearly 5,000 people are killed in commercial truck accidents. An additional 105,000 people are injured in these accidents. 18 wheeler trucks and tractor-trailer trucks kill another 5,000 people each year. These staggering statistics really are an eye-opener.

Unfortunately, those that do survive an 18-wheeler or truck accident are usually left with extensive injuries and costly medical bills. Now that they are injured, possibly unable to work, and facing life-changing realities, what are they supposed to do? The first step is to hire a tractor trailer accident lawyer. Many people will suggest that one may not need an attorney, but there are a few factors to consider.

First, an insurance company DOES NOT want to pay you - especially in the event of an 18 wheeler accident. Insurance companies are trained to minimize costs by paying a little as possible for injury claims. Very few businesses are happy to give money out - even if you desperately need it. Just like plenty of other businesses, insurance companies want to retain as much money as possible. The adjusters may tell you they are giving you their best offer and that they are making you a fair offer. However, how can an adjuster on the phone tell you what it is fair? They are not having to deal with any pain and suffering or medical bills that are stacking up? Their job is to get you to agree to the smallest amount of money possible.

Second, many insurance companies do not take the time to fully review your case. Has the company reviewed every single medical record connected to your truck accident? Have they had investigators check the accuracy of the other 18 wheeler driver's statement? Will the insurance company be willing to pay for any future treatment you may require? If one cannot answer 'yes' to all these questions, how can they expect a fair offer from an insurance company? This is where a tractor trailer accident lawyer can be very useful.

Attorneys experienced in 18 wheeler and truck accident claims can help you evaluate how much money you should be entitled to. These professionals review each and every aspect of these cases to ensure that you receive the maximum amount of compensation for your injuries and any other hardship you faced as a result of your accident. By using a variety of experts, medical doctors, accident reconstruction teams, and other investigation teams, law firms can understand these accidents in greater detail. In cases like these, details can make a huge difference in the company's offer. For instance, one truck accident attorney obtained a $52 Million Dollar verdict in a commercial truck accident case. Not surprisingly, the insurance company's offer was significantly below that amount - not even close, actually.

So, when you receive an offer from an insurance company that seems too low to be fair - your gut is probably right. At the very least, take the offer to an truck accident attorney for a free case review. After looking at the details of your accident, you should receive an answer fairly quickly as to whether or not a fair settlement offer has been made.
