Online writing is quite different from writing for other print media like newspaper or magazines. People explore internet these days for instant information and they don't have the time to go through lengthy write-ups.

Sometimes browsers surf internet for some juicy writings but there are many instances when they look for genuine information on a specific subject. There are students and career aspirants who explore online to know about career options which are in demand at present. Again, there are travelers who plan the next trip based on online traveling tips. It is advisable not to take the online writing casually and offer incomplete or inaccurate information in your write-ups. Rather, you need to be even more careful and master the art of online writing in order to grab readers' attention within seconds. Often it is seen that readers don't even go beyond the heading of online articles. So, if the starting of the write-up is not catchy enough then there is hardly any chance that your article will impress readers.

Then how come writers like Parker Hallam are drawing all the attention and grabbing lucrative writing assignments? This is because he has unique writing styles, which are quite different from contemporary writers. While writing on any topic, he does thorough research and takes care to offer authentic information only. He never takes his writing assignment lightly, no matter how tough or simple the subject is.
