Jewelry which is termed sometimes as « vintage » it comprises many decades or epochs, which different designs, looks or settings. Antique rings are the most symbolic of jewelry embellishment. Rings given in love or affection, whether bestowed as a gift or to indulge oneself, all are rich in the emotional sentiment behind the beauty and are highly recommended in any type of situation, environment, state or mood. Every antique ring oozes distinction in the same manner as the person who wears it.

Antique rings are a statement, a manifest of good taste, elegance and gracefulness. Generally speaking, estate jewelry refers to the jewelry that is vintage and/or antique nature. It is a term used to denominate formerly owned jewelry, usually acquired from estates of deceased or living and private entities. There are a number of periods of vintage and estate jewelry such as Georgian, early Victorian, Romantic, mid-Victorian, Art Nouveau, Edwardian, Art Deco and Retro. The last of them, the retro jewelry, is inspired by Hollywood and is colorful, bold and elaborate.

Diamond rings, for example, especially anniversary diamond rings and engagement diamond rings can make any occasion a memory that certainly will last forever. Purchasing jewelry such as antique rings can be an exhilarating experience, but choosing the perfect one has its challenges if one is unsure of what he/she is looking for.

There are places on the World Wide Web where the wide assortment of Antique Rings up until 1930 includes Georgian Rings with foil-backed rose-cut diamonds from 1714 to 1830 including the reign of four kings, from George I to George IV. The period between 1837 and 1901 was a long reign for Queen Victoria whose high regard and admiration of jewellery and Victorian Rings was fairly noticeable. Even though the Edwardian period from 1901 to 1910 was limited and short, it made an unforgettable and remarkable statement of diamonds and pearls in elaborate platinum latticework making durable Edwardian Rings. Art Deco Rings are still an all-time favourite for many buyers.
