How to get your hands on Oscar Award Tickets? by George Olson

Article published on February 9th 2012 | Television

Each season, the entertainment community and movie lovers around the world gears for its biggest celebration: the Academy Awards, more commonly known as the Oscars. There is exclusive press coverage of the red carpet event, even down to the arrival of the celebrities; flash bulbs and microphones abound as the VIP guests and other nominees make their way down the "omega event" flanked by cheering supporters and onlookers.

Interest and eagerness rises to a fevered pitch, when millions of movie lovers tune in to watch the beguiling ceremony and learn who will receive the most coveted awards and honors in filmmaking. The Oscars confer the previous year's best cinema achievements as decided by some of the world's most renowned motion picture artists and professionals. The juries maintain absolutely privacy until the moment the show's presenters announce the winners on live television.

Intense energy at the backstage

The Oscars aren't just meant to be Hollywood's most vibrant and glamorous, though "hundreds of artists, musicians, make-up masters, cameramen and chefs, work days on end preparing for the big show. It's very intense. It's live TV; they have one chance to get it done correctly.

Arrange a concierge for Oscar Award Ticket

You may assume that you should be the quintessential "VIPs" that is, invited to the most exclusive events. However, to assume that would be WRONG. As much as writers, directors and actors want to win the awards, thousands of film fans each year want to attend the big day at the Kodak Theater. While being nominated for an award is a sure-fire way to grab a seat at the show, the good news is that when purchasing tickets from a ticket broker you generally have favorite seating options to choose from. He will allow you to pick the exact seat location or budget that fits you. Additionally, a ticket broker will have tickets available for events that are sold out or don't even go on sale to the public.

If you choose to go through an experienced, reputable ticket broker you will pay a few dollars more, but chances are that you will end up with the seats close to your favorite celebrities, where you can check out the incredible clothing on display, or maybe just catch more gossip, news, predictions and coverage of Oscar night quite intimately. Many people opine that avoiding the box office hassle, as well as the memory of sitting in great seats is worth than the extra cost.
