Five Important Tips for Buying a Used Car Online by IsaacLindsay

Article published on July 16th 2012 | Travel

Buying a used car online is both amazingly easy, and somewhat risky. The good news is, car shoppers no longer have to endure harrowing trips to used car lots. There are still some important things to keep in mind in order to get the best deal online for a used car. Here are five important tips for helping you to succeed.

Unleash the power of email and Internet research. If you find an interesting listing, say on Craigslist, your immediate response should be to email the seller and ask to see the vehicle in person. The response (or lack thereof) is your first clue to the trustworthiness of the seller. If you smell anything fishy in the response, avoid the deal. Make your first moves using email, text, or phone, and only then should you schedule an appointment to see the car yourself. The same principle goes for shopping on EBay. Find sellers with high ratings and good customer satisfaction.

Stay close to home. Although you can conveniently purchase a used car online, youâ€™ll have to eventually go physically to get the car. Chances are, you can find a good car that is within a reasonable distance from where you live. This is important, because youâ€™ll want to look at the car in person before you pony up the cash and drive off. Look for deals that are within at least a fifty-mile radius of where you live. Making a close-to-home purchase reduces risk, minimizes hassle, and improves your chances of making a great purchase.

Use caution when making payments. If you are purchasing a used car from an individual, on Craigslist for example, insist on paying cash in person. When using a reputable used car site such as eBay Motors, use your credit card. Credit cards can help protect against fraudulent sellers.

Verify the price of the car. Once you find a car that youâ€™re interested in, see if the asking price is right. Simply go to a website such as Edmunds.com or kbb.com, enter in the vehicle details, and find out the valued price. A price check is one of your early clues as to whether or not you should purchase the car.

Purchase a VIN check. The VIN, or Vehicle Identification Number, is a powerful weapon in negotiating a price, discovering the history of the vehicle, and determining the wisdom of a potential purchase. If the seller does not provide the VIN, ask for it, or simply look at the vehicle and write it down. You can find most vehicle VINs at the bottom of the front driverâ€™s side windshield or the inside of the driverâ€™s door.

Buying a used car online is a smart move. It does, however, come with some risks. As long as you are practicing good sense and following a few solid points of advice, you can make a satisfying used car purchase.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/travel-articles/five-important-tips-for-buying-a-used-car-online.htm - Article Side

IsaacLindsay - About Author:

a Colorado Auto Finders has a large selection of the new and used cars and trucks you want at affordable prices. Isaac Lindsay wanted to check out an assortment of good a new and used trucks in Denver before he chose the one he wanted.

Article Keywords:
Colorado Auto Finders, new and used trucks in Denver

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!